

Cell phone use is intrusive enough when users have the option to step out of earshot. On a plane, the last thing a person trying to sleep, read, or eat wants to hear is constant ringing and half of strangers' conversation. There's no reason a conversation can't wait a few hours.